Early November Rose

Medium: Photography

Artist Statement:

Summer had ended and school had started back. I knew very well that with as much work as I was going to soon have on my shoulders, the most important thing I needed to do before I was put under that stress-- was to get outside. Get fresh air, enjoy the nature. This photo is representation of the life around us and how even if things may seem difficult or stressful, beauty is surrounding us and lives in anywhere from the ground, to the sky. The rose in the picture had water droplets on it from a recent rain which symbolizes life and renewal- something that had a lot of meaning to me at the time. I found it unbelievable that something as miniscule as a piece of nature could in someone's eyes become a piece of art, and in my perspective, motivation and inspiration for the new school year ahead of me.

Description:

Some of the strong elements of my photo include the bold red, pink, and yellow hues reflected by the lighting on the rose. The small details like the water, and even the technical things like the blurred of the photo make the subject stand out against the space behind it.
