

Amor & Dan 15

Intertwined

Student: Allison Warner

District: Private

School: Johnson Christian School

Instructor: Nicole Smith

Intertwined

Medium: Water color paints, and graphite (Pencil)

Artist Statement:

This piece of art that I have created is meant to convey the relationship between two people when they get married (become one). Although they think that they are growing apart (facing away from each other), you can see that their heart's are still combined into one and passion still flows from it. The girl, (flowers) has found that she is down to earth and cares more about reality and what is actually happening. The man, (tree) has his heads in the clouds and wants to stay in his dreams. Even though they are very different they are able to support each other through even the toughest of storms. The nature surrounding them is supposed to show the growth that they created when going through hardships together, and how their love is "rooted" within each other.

Description:

The curvy branches of the tree shows the twists and turns that they have taken in their life and created leaves (opportunities) and made something beautiful. The red around their combined heart shows the passion and love in their marriage is still very much alive even if they seem to be going different directions. You can see the man's body through the woman's because a marriage doesn't mean that one person is "in front/ in control" but that they share their lies and decisions with each other. The red and black around their eyes basically just shows that they are getting older and more tired with each passing year, yet they manage to be each others roots and keep them alive.

Status: Sell