

Why We Honor Veterans

By Autumn

Veterans Day is a holiday we celebrate to show thanks for our Veterans. Veterans are men and women who served in the armed forces like the U.S. military. Veterans are people who are in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, or the Marines. It takes bravery to serve in the U.S. military. Many people in the military have to move far from their families for a long time. They miss holidays, birthdays and special events. They risk their lives to keep our country safe. Veterans Day is celebrated on November 11th because World War I ended on the 11th day of the 11th Month at the 11th hour.

Our enemies kept figuring out our battle plans. In 1942, a group of 29 Navajo Marines solved the problem by creating a secret code based on their native language and became the code talkers. About 78 years ago Navajo code talkers used the code to communicate battle plans. They used codes to share details like when they were going or where they had seen the enemy. The code created by the Navajo helped the U.S. win the war. They were a key to our success. Our enemies kept figuring out our battle plans but the Navajo solved the problem by creating a code.

The Tuskegee Airmen were not wanted. The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African American U.S Air Force pilots. They trained really hard even though only one school in the entire country would accept them. Some of them had to move really far away from their families to go to the school in Alabama. They guided the bombs in the sky. They once set a record by shooting five enemy aircrafts out of the sky in under four minutes. They kept trying to be better airmen even though other people didn't want them to be there. The military tried to make the entrance exam really hard so they would fail because they were African American. The military was segregated until 1948. The Tuskegee Airmen were not wanted but they kept trying no matter what happened.

In conclusion that's why we honor our veterans. They risk their lives just to save ours. They were not wanted but kept trying anyway. They made a code out of native language to win World War I. Banks, schools, and buildings close to honor Veterans and what they have done for our country. Some people make gifts like drawing pictures, and flags.

Veteran's Day is a holiday to celebrate our brave Military, Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Air Force, or Marines also the Tuskegee Airmen and Navajo code talkers. On Veteran's Day we take time off to honor veterans. Veteran's Day is special to people who have family in the Army or someone who died in the Army. People in the military miss special events with their family because they have to travel for long periods of time with no connection to their family. But some write letters to people in the military and keep in touch. So today I'll be talking about the Tuskegee Airmen and the Navajo code talkers.

The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African American pilots in the U.S. Air Force. They even kept trying to be better airmen even though some other people didn't want them to be there. The military tried to make the entrance exam really hard so they failed to get in because they didn't want African American. The military was segregated until 1948 our president Truman unsegregated them. The Tuskegee Airmen trained really hard even though only one school in the whole country would accept them. Some of them had to move really far from their family to go to the school in Alabama. They guided the bombers where to shoot the bombs in the sky. They once set a record by shooting five enemy aircrafts out of the sky in four minutes. They helped win the war and played a big part in the war just like the Navajo code talkers.

Our enemies kept figuring out our battle plans. In 1942, a group of 29 Navajo in the U.S. Marines solved the problem by making a secret code based on their native language and now are known as the Navajo code talkers. About 400 Navajo code talkers used the codes to communicate battle plans with each other. They used codes to share details like where they were going or where they had seen the enemy. The code created by the Navajo helped the U.S. win the war. They were the key to our success. Our enemies kept figuring out our battle plans, but the Navajo solved the problem and helped the U.S. win the war.

That is what the Tuskegee Airmen and Navajo code talkers did to help our country. This is why we honor our veterans because they helped during the war and helped win the wars for our country. It takes honor and bravery to serve for the military, Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and Coast Guard. Some died doing their jobs. Do you know how a group of a Native Americans helped win World War II? Today a new memorial is being planned in Washington D.C., the U.S. capital, to honor Native Americans who have served in the military including the code talkers.

The code talkers are really helpful because they helped the U.S. win WWII and if the code talkers didn't help we would have lost WWII. And that's why we honor the code talkers for helping win world war two.

The code talkers and other military people keep us safe and they risk their life for us and they're brave. Some don't get to go home to their family. They risk their mental health for us to save other lives in the wars like their team mates.

In the end we honor our veterans because we appreciate the people in the military who helped win world war two. The code talkers gave us a huge advantage. Why did it take so long for the U.S. to honor the Native Americans who fought in these wars?

My uncle sergeant Jason was in the U.S. Army. He was stationed in Canada and went to Afghanistan and Kuwait Afghanistan. He was the head of his team and in charge of a weapon squad combat medic forward observer who called in support from helicopters and airplanes and anti-armor specialists. I'm very proud of my uncle he is also a young Native American veteran.

Why do we celebrate Veteran's Day? We celebrate Veteran's Day because it was an allied victory for the Eastern front with the defeat of the Western front of Europe including Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungry, and Ottoman Turkey. I will be writing about Veteran's Day.

The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African American Air Force soldiers in America. They guided bomber planes through the sky. But it was hard to join the Air Force as an African American. The military made the entrance test very hard. Also, the Tuskegee Institute was the only school that would accept African Americans. To top that off the one school was in Alabama. Even though the test was very hard they kept trying. So we thank the Tuskegee Airmen for their service.

Who were the Navajo Code talkers? The Navajo Code talkers were in World War II. The U.S. originally had normal codes they talked in until the enemy started hacking into their radio channels. In 1942 the Navajo solved that problem by making a code out of their language. So the enemy not only had to figure out a code they also had to figure out a language. About 400 Navajo Code talkers used the code. They used the code to share important details like where they were going or where the enemy was through the battle phone.

You can now see that there were all kinds of different people in the military. Veteran's Day is not just a holiday in the year. We celebrate it so all the veterans know we all honor their work. We honor all veterans. That is why we celebrate Veteran's Day.
