Artist Statement

I wanted to make a piece that shows that no matter how strong one is, they will still need help, and sometimes from the smallest of places. I put cracks into the rock monster to show that he has been through some tough times and is close to breaking, but with the help of someone so much smaller than him he is able to heal from his wounds.

Description

I used a lot of purple through the piece to give off a mystical feel. I also used three different tones of grey to separate rocks by where they are, warm grey for the rock monsters, cool grey for the background, and neutral grey for the foreground to pull
