

Region honors its National Board Certified Teachers

The numbers keep growing. When the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards announced its 2018 class of new and renewing teachers earning national certification, the NEWESD 101 region was well represented. The list included 150 names – 83 earning national certification for the first time and 67 renewing after their initial five-year term.

National certification is one of the highest achievements in teaching. The rigorous process, commonly requiring three years to complete, requires candidates to demonstrate standards-based evidence of the positive effect they have on student learning.

On February 25, NEWESD 101 honored its distinguished teachers in a ceremony at the Talbott Event Center. While inclement weather created travel challenges for many, a festive atmosphere prevailed for those who were able to attend. The honorees included:
